

EGG SCRAMBLE - There were no holds barred at Minnick Field, Baumholder, Germany, as about 500 children went on a Saturday Easter egg hunt.

that one boy must have broken the record for gun-jumping as he took off far in front of the rest of the searchers. Easter Bunny (below) thought it safe to parachute in after the hunt, but he's about to be mobbed for more treats. Next time, he'll look before he leaps. -S&S Photos, Schueiller

German Leftists Vow New Violence Hanoi Claims

They battled police outside plants where Springer newspapers are printed in Frankfurt, Hamburg, Essen and Munich.

In West Germany, 85 youths were arrested. At least 25 demonstrators and 44 policemen were injured.

Free-swinging West Berlin police charged demonstrators who had taken to the streets for the third straight day, driving them into side streets and store fronts to seek shelter.

The demonstrators had refused to clear the area as ordered.

In many West German cities, demonstrators Saturday blocked main traffic crossings and highways for five minutes to pro-test the American policy in Vietnam.

The action was organized by the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament as part of the Easter Ban the Bomb program.

West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger made an appeal to students Saturday in a nationwide radio and television broadcast. He said the nation would not tolerate violence. He advised the students to turn their backs on "radical gang leaders."

In Bonn, the Bundestag ordered a special parliamentary hearing for next week on the shooting of Dutschke and the wave of violent left-wing demonstrations that followed.

The violence included the burning of trucks belonging to Springer as well as the interruption of church services and

All hotels were packed, with the overflow of visitors bedded down in pensions, private homes, schools and monasteries.

An unseasonable heat wave seared most of the Holy Land with temperatures mounting into the 90s. More of the same was forecast for Easter.

Many of the pilgrims this year are of humble means, and have been unable to afford hotel rooms, which in any event were fully booked well in advance.

On Easter Sunday the Latin patriarch will enter the Crusader-built Church of the Holy ment and the copper mining companies here.
