Woman terrorist dies in jail cell

MUNICH, Sunday. — A woman terrorist whose release was demanded last month by air hijackers and the kidnappers of a prominent industrialist was found hanged in her prison cell yesterday.

Ingrid Schubert, 33, was serving 13 years in Stadelheim prison, Munich, for attempted murder and bank robbery.

A spokesman for the Bavarian Justice Ministry said today that an autopsy had produced no evidence that opposed the belief it was suicide.

Schubert, a former member of the Red Army Faction, died nearly a month after three other terrorist members of the faction — Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe — were found dead or dying in their cells at Stammheim prison, near Stuttgart.

Their deaths came hours after West German commandos stormed a hijacked Lufthansa jet at Mogadishu, Somalia, on October 18 and freed 85 passengers and crew held hostage for the release of 11 jailed German terrorists.

Three of the four hijackers were killed in the attack and the fourth was wounded.

Leftist extremists throughout Western Europe claimed that police had murdered Baader, Ensslin and Raspe. Schubert's death appears likely to raise the same charge.

Schubert had been confined at Stammheim with Baader and the others from June 25 to August 18, when she was transferred to the Munich prison.
