

Terrorist bombs kill 3 at U.S. Army German post

HEIDELBERG (AP) — West German authorities pushed an intensive search today for terrorists who bombed the U.S. Army's European headquarters in Heidelberg, killing three Americans and wounding five others.

Investigators said that so far they had no clues. But the West German Interior Minister, Hans Genscher, said police were concentrating on an extremist group known as the Baader-Meinhof Gang.

A group called the Red Army Faction, believed a part of the gang, claimed responsibility for the bombing on May 11 that killed an American lieutenant-colonel at a U.S. Army headquarters in Frankfurt and for recent bombings at police stations in Augsburg and Munich.

The Heidelberg bombing Wednesday night was the fifth terrorist attack in West Germany in the last two weeks and the second on a U.S. Army installation.

Powerful time bombs apparently set by a terrorist organization opposed to American war action in Vietnam damaged the U.S. consulate and American Legion headquarters in Paris today, but no one was injured.

A third time bomb was found in the Avenue des Champs Elysees offices of Pan American Airways and was defused by police bomb specialists. Trans World Airways was warned that another bomb had been hidden in their offices, but it could not be found.

A Committee of Co-ordination, in a communique, said it was responsible for the bombs and made it clear it was an action against American Vietnam policy.

Several hundred persons were evacuated from the TWA and Pan Am buildings on the Avenue des Champs Elysees as the search for bombs went on. A nearby shopping arcade was also evacuated.

TW said it received a call saying the bomb had been placed in the basement. At Pan Am, the bomb was said to have been placed in a locker.

The bombs in Heidelberg exploded in two cars parked about 150 yards apart in lots facing a data processing centre, an officers' club and a theatre.
