

Brezhnev Suggested Bilateral Troop Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — At the Moscow summit, Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev suggested to President Nixon that the two superpowers agree on troop cuts in Europe, ignoring their allies in NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

Diplomatic informants, in reporting this, said the President replied with a firm "No." They say he told Brezhnev that the allies in NATO would be fully informed about the summit at the Bonn meeting of allied foreign ministers, scheduled to follow the conference in the Soviet capital.

Western European officials have expressed delight about

Nixon's response, the sources said.

U.S. officials would not deny the Brezhnev approach but prefer not to talk about it. They acknowledge, however, that the Soviet Union now expects the United States to come forward with new suggestions on how to approach the problem of mutual and balanced force reduction in Europe.

"The ball is on our court," one official acknowledged. "It will be difficult, he said, to find an acceptable formula since Brezhnev in his talks with the President categorically ruled out the most obvious 'block-to-block approach.' That approach would mean that NATO and the Warsaw Pact should negotiate this delicate and complicated issue.

NATO last fall asked the Soviets to receive Manlio Brosio, former secretary-general of the alliance, to hold preparatory talks on reduced forces. The answer was icy silence. Brezhnev explained to Nixon that he had nothing against Brosio, a former Italian ambassador to Moscow who speaks Russian, but that he would not welcome a diplomat representing NATO.

How then should the question be approached, the President is reported to have asked. To nobody's surprise, Brezhnev then suggested that perhaps the United States and the Soviet Union could work out something together and then make their allies agree to it.

Behind Back

No, thank you, Nixon replied, explaining that the United States could not do that behind its ally's back. Brezhnev's response was that he made his proposal and it is up to the United States to suggest something else.

The Nixon-Brezhnev communique issued at the end of the summit dealt cautiously with reduced forces.

"Both sides believe," it said, "that the goal of insuring stability and security in Europe would be served by a reciprocal reduction of armed forces and armaments, first of all in Central Europe." It suggested a special forum where the troop cut issue should be negotiated.

stopover in Miami on their flight back to Indiana.

"The more I'm talking, the name's fitting me," said Kim, who was modishly dressed in a yellow shirt, bell-bottom trousers and boots.

His mother grinned, but said, "I wouldn't wish this on anyone." Then she turned to her husband and asked him to recount what he had said on the flight to Key West for the reunion.

"I merely asked, 'What if it's not Kim?'" Kadas recalled.

Kadas said he was employed by Inland Steel Corp. Mrs. Kadas works as a stenographer-clerk.

Officers have quoted young Kadas as saying the only thing he remembered was a flashing green light in the Gulf of Mexico off Key West, apparently a buoy about two miles from shore.

Was Shriveled

McCain said the youth was shriveled from exposure to water when he appeared at the highway patrol office on the evening of June 4. He was wearing swimming trunks and had a compass, knife and a can opener. Officers had theorized that he fell off a fishing boat.

The youth was placed in jail for three days as police checked to see if he had been using drugs, but when there were no withdrawal indications he was released to the custody of Chapman.

He recuperated physically, and McCain previously had quoted two doctors as saying the youth's lapse of memory appeared legitimate.

However, Dr. A. Louis O'Connor, director of the Florida Keys Guidance Clinic, said he examined the boy briefly last Friday, but that Kim refused to return for a second session Monday.

"I viewed him with professional skepticism," he said, "but I'm not prepared to say either way whether he had amnesia."

The youth has spent his time in Key West doing odd jobs for the Salvation Army, swimming and playing blues, jazz and honkytonk on the piano.

McCain said the parents told him the boy "had a lot of stamina and endurance, so he could have been in the water for a long time."

Only Tuesday, young Kadas described himself as "satisfied where I'm at, but I know someone is looking for me."

Garage in Frankfurt

Baader-Meinhof Hideout Found

BONN (AP) — Federal security police announced Thursday discovery of a terrorist hideout but failed to capture any of the remaining members of an elusive gang of anarchist bombers.

A statement by the Bonn security branch of the federal criminal agency said Frankfurt police discovered a garage in the city which contained two apparently stolen cars, short-wave transmitters, fuse wires and other equipment associated with the type of bomb used in a string of recent politically motivated explosions.

"Further traces in the garage permit the conclusion that it was used to store, mix or prepare explosives," the statement said, adding that fingerprints found on the two autos coincided with those of missing members of the Baader-Meinhof gang.

6 in Custody

The gang, six leading members of which were captured this month, is held responsible for politically motivated bomb explosions which killed four U.S. soldiers and injured several Americans and Germans at U.S. military installations, police stations and the like.

Former journalist Ulrike Meinhof, the female half of the Bonnie-and-Clyde duo, is still at large.

Partner Andreas Baader and two other men were captured after a dramatic shootout in a garage hideout discovered early this month by the Frankfurt police.

The discovery announced Thursday was the second gang hideout to be uncovered in two weeks.

The police statement said the garage hideout is situated in suburban Frankfurt's Ginnheimer Landstrasse, not far from where Baader was captured June 1 after being wounded in the buttocks.

The two cars found in the garage were an NSU 1000 TT and a Volkswagen 411 Variant. Neither had registration plates, the police said.

Among the other items in the garage were a piece of green cloth similar to that found at the scene of a bomb explosion in the Hamburg headquarters of conservative newspaper publisher Axel Springer May 19, as well as strips of colored adhesive tape used in the manufacture of several dud bombs discovered by police earlier.

The police statement called on the public for help in discovering who rented the garage and who had been seen driving the two cars parked in it.

Bombing Near Hanoi Reported Curtailed

Podgorny was expected to be in Hanoi three or four days.

In war action Wednesday, American planes attacked an army barracks and a railroad bridge between the Chinese border and Hanoi, then knocked out four large fuel dumps along the North Vietnamese coast, the U.S. command said Thursday.

In the raids Wednesday, U.S. officers said the U.S. jets streaked within 45 seconds flying time of Hanoi during the attacks on the bridge and barracks. The raids took place as Podgorny was on his way to Hanoi.

The U.S. command said F4 Phantom fighter bombers attacked the sprawling Hung Hoa army barracks and supply base Wednesday, 33 miles northwest of Hanoi and 100 miles from China.

sance has confirmed that eight warehouses and support buildings were destroyed and 10 others damaged," the communique said.

The command said other Phantoms destroyed the Phu Tho railroad bridge, 38 miles northwest of Hanoi and 105 miles from China. The bridge was part of the battered northwestern rail line running between Hanoi and the Chinese frontier.

The statement said Air Force and Navy jets flew up the North Vietnamese coast Wednesday to batter four fuel dumps along the Gulf of Tonkin. Pilots said they saw several oil-fed fires.

Communist sources in Moscow hinted Podgorny's trip might lead to a new Soviet peace effort. "It may be an attempt to counter Chinese action and seek measures to bring about a peaceful solution of the conflict," the sources said.

Bomb Squad Hunts QE2 After Threat

NEW YORK (AP) — The police bomb squad and specially trained dogs met the Queen Elizabeth 2 when she docked in New York Thursday after a bomb threat against the luxury liner was received in London, ship's Capt. William Law said.

The 1,248 passengers aboard debarked with many not knowing of the threat.

The threat was that the bomb would go off at noon, Law said. At that time the ship's crew of 900 was still searching the vessel. The last of the passengers had departed by about 10:30 a.m.

The threat to the QE2 was the second in less than a month. On May 18 another threat brought a Royal Navy demolition crew speeding to the mid-Atlantic. Demolition experts were parachuted alongside the vessel for a search. No bombs were turned up.

The caller during the earlier scare said that unless the line paid $350,000 bombs would be set off.

Barricaded German Kills Three Cops Before Capture

OVERHAUSEN, Germany (UPI) — A 43-year-old West German barricaded himself in his suburban apartment with his wife and five children Thursday and started shooting at police who tried to arrest him.

The hail of bullets from the besieged apartment in the Ruhr industrial region killed three police sergeants and severely wounded another sergeant and a police commissioner, police said.

Scores of police finally stormed the house and arrested the gunman, Karlheinz Girod, 43, and his wife, ending a siege that lasted more than four hours.

West German police already were engaged in a nationwide hunt for a band of anarchists who bombed USAREUR Hq in Heidelberg and V Corps Hq in Frankfurt last month. Four U.S. servicemen died in the bombings.

But police said Girod was not suspected of being involved with the anarchists.

The shooting started shortly after 9:30 a.m., when a squad of police called at Girod's apartment in a three-story apartment house in Sterkrade, a suburb of Oberhausen.

The police had a warrant to search Girod's apartment for weapons and explosives, but were fired upon from the barricaded apartment.

After calling up reinforcements, police evacuated five other families who had apartments in the building. Then they tried to smoke out the gunman with tear gas. When that failed they sent in a lawyer to talk to Girod.

Finally the gunman's 36-year-old brother persuaded Girod to let the five children out by way of a ladder propped against a window.

When the children were clear, scores of police stormed the building and arrested Girod and his wife.
