

Massive Manhunt Underway

16 Suspects Named In Probe Of Murder

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Calling on every citizen to help, the West German government went public with its hunt for 16 young men and women wanted for the kidnap-murder of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer and other recent terrorist attacks.

A blackout in effect since Schleyer was kidnaped on Sept. 5 ended within minutes of the announcement that his body had been found Wednesday in an automobile trunk in eastern France.

Photographs of the 10 women and six men wanted, 22 to 28 years old, were shown one by one on all television networks as the announcers read their descriptions and biographical sketches. Persons with information were asked to call special telephone numbers and report anonymously.

"They shall not rest," government spokesman Klaus Boelling said of the killers. "Every citizen in our country will help security officials track down the criminals."

But the terrorists vowed the violence "has just begun," and anti-German demonstrations rocked several European cities.

Leftist protesters clashed with police in Athens Wednesday night and staged marches in London and a handful of Italian cities.

A march was scheduled for today in Rome.

The radicals accuse the Bonn government of killing three leading terrorists the government said committed suicide in their prison cells Tuesday.

Among those wanted was Susanne Albrecht, 26-year-old daughter of a prominent Hamburg lawyer. She has been identified as one of the killers of Frankfurt banker Juergen Ponto, a family friend, last July.

The small band, remnants of the Baader-Meinhof gang, is also blamed for the assassination of the government's chief prosecutor, Siegfried Buback, in the wave of anti-government, anti-capitalist violence that began six months ago.

The German gang also apparently was linked to the Arabic-speaking hijackers who took over a Lufthansa jetliner last week since both Schleyer's kidnapers and the hijackers demanded the release of the same 11 German terrorists from West German prisons. The government did not comply, and a West German commando team rescued the 86 hostages aboard the airliner in Somalia early Tuesday, killing three of the hijackers and seriously wounding the fourth.

Schleyer's murder had been expected killers. "Every citizen in our country will help security officials track down the criminals."

But the terrorists vowed the violence "has just begun," and anti-German demonstrations rocked several European cities.

Leftist protesters clashed with police in Athens Wednesday night and staged marches in London and a handful of Italian cities.

A march was scheduled for today in Rome.

The radicals accuse the Bonn government of killing three leading terrorists the government said committed suicide in their prison cells Tuesday.

Among those wanted was Susanne Albrecht, 26-year-old daughter of a prominent Hamburg lawyer. She has been identified as one of the killers of Frankfurt banker Juergen Ponto, a family friend, last July.

The small band, remnants of the Baader-Meinhof gang, is also blamed for the assassination of the government's chief prosecutor, Siegfried Buback, in the wave of anti-government, anti-capitalist violence that began six months ago.

The German gang also apparently was linked to the Arabic-speaking hijackers who took over a Lufthansa jetliner last week since both Schleyer's kidnapers and the hijackers demanded the release of the same 11 German terrorists from West German prisons. The government did not comply, and a West German commando team rescued the 86 hostages aboard the airliner in Somalia early Tuesday, killing three of the hijackers and seriously wounding the fourth.

Schleyer's murder had been expected since the commando raid demonstrated the government's determination not to free the imprisoned terrorists and the government's announcement that the three prisoners at the head of the list — Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe — committed suicide in their cells Tuesday.

The body of the 62-year-old president of the associations of employers and industries was found after telephone tips sent French police to a car parked on a quiet street in the Alsatian town of Mulhouse, 10 miles from the German border.

First reports said Schleyer's throat had been cut, but police said later he had a single bullet wound below the right ear and two wounds on top of the head, apparently caused by blows from a heavy instrument.

French and German forensic experts were to conduct an autopsy, probably today.

Schleyer was ambushed Sept. 5 on a Cologne street by at least five persons who killed his three bodyguards and driver. He was a director of the Daimler-Benz automobile company, and as head of the national associations of industries and employers he was the nation's best-known spokesman for big business.

A communique sent by Schleyer's killers to an ultra-leftist Paris newspaper said his death "is not commensurate with our sorrow and our anger after the Mogadishu and Stammheim massacres." It indicated he was shot Tuesday.

"We will never forget the blood spilled by (Chancellor Helmut) Schmidt and the imperialists who support him," it said.